COPENHAGEN

Hosting offer

Danish Cultural Institute - Strategic Communications / Marketing & Communications

The 2-day mobility scheme will build on previous communications and mobility visits with the aim to satisfy the need for stronger strategic communications, as outlined in the latest EUNIC Strategic Framework.

This hosting offer will focus on three main areas, reflecting priorities of EUNIC and their aim to strengthen advocacy missions: communications within EUNIC member organisations, communications as EUNIC, and the upcoming 20th anniversary of EUNIC in 2026.

MUNICH

Hosting offer

Goethe-Institut – Cultural Institutes in a Digitalised World

The hosting offer will continue EUNIC's ongoing engagement with the best practices of international cultural relations in a digitalised world, and it also builds on the programme and events comprised in the 2020 'EUNIC DX/AI week', co-organised by EUNIC Global and the Goethe-Institut.

The programme will include several knowledge sharing sessions on the use of digital tools, with input from experts at the Goethe-Institut headquarters as well as partnering researchers, and hands-on training formats for the use of AI and VR tools.

Colleagues from language departments who experiment, or seek to experiment, with the use of relevant and future-oriented technologies as well as library or information technology personnel from our EUNIC partner institutions.

Colleagues who implement, or seek to implement, cultural programmes that reflect and revolve around the effect of AI and VR on cultural production, human creativity, or artistic agency and autonomy.

STUTTGART

Hosting offer

ifa – European Strategy, ICR Research and Art Biennials

The hosting offers will build on several previous EUNIC Knowledge Sharing Workshops organised by ifa – for instance, the KSW "New Geopolitics", linked to the strategic working area and the KSW "Research and Documentation", linked to the research working area.

Participants will be able to choose one among three different main topics to focus on: European Strategy, Research on International Cultural Relations, and Art Biennials. All of these topics are linked to ifa's main areas of work and priorities.

AMSTERDAM

Hosting offer

DutchCulture - Decolonising Cultural Relations

The 3-day mobility scheme will focus on exploring decolonial practices in cultural relations, with a particular focus on reciprocal learning and ethical engagement.

This hosting offer builds on recent discussions and workshops held within the EUNIC network around decolonising cultural relations by DutchCulture and also the Ukrainian Institute, including the recent Knowledge Sharing Workshop on this topic.

It also aligns with broader EUNIC efforts to foster reciprocal and ethical cultural exchanges under the Fair International Cultural Collaboration banner.

Ideally, cultural managers and project coordinators with experience and interest in decolonial practices, reciprocal learning, and ethical cultural exchange frameworks.

Colleagues working with marginalised or migrant communities, as well as those seeking to deepen their understanding of decolonial approaches in cultural programming.

Open to all who seek to move away from logics and dynamics of extraction in cultural relations. The hosting offer is not exclusive to colleagues from countries or active in regions which have been involved in national histories of colonisation and/or decolonization. Decolonisation as a term is used specifically to make this move possible from this by unlearning and undoing.

PARIS

Hosting offer

Institut français – Public debate, support to civil society organisation and youth leaders, and event management

The hosting offer will focus on public debate. Facing the War: European Dialogues is a series of public debate events bringing together public thinkers, policy makers, and civil society representatives, both emerging and leading, to discuss how the large-scale invasion of Ukraine has reshaped the European Union and shed new lights on its symbols, shared history, and common values.

Participants will have the opportunity to follow the preparation of the institution's up-coming events and to discover how the overall project is structured across teams and departments within the Institut français, and how it relates to its long-term strategy.
